Secale Cornutum.

A tincture is made of the fresh fungus, ergot of rye.

General Effects -The chief interest in the action of ergot centres about its power to produce tonic contractions of involuntary muscle fibre, the arterioles are violently and persistently contracted, causing dry coldness of the surface and even gangrene of the lower extremities, the peristaltic muscles of the bowels are affected and the gravid uterus contracts violently Convulsions are liable to occur Anæsthesia and paralysis result, particularly tremblings and paraplegia
